

Unveiling the Bronze Pairs: ESFP & INTP | Season 14

Part 3 | CS Joseph

Transcribed on October 21, 2025 at 08:33 PM

Source: <https://youtu.be/fAsVF75qE7I?si=FbNbMzv00UJlpPqM>

I gave you all I own, put you on this golden throne. But I'm a little stronger now. What's up EagleHackers? Welcome to Season 14, Part 3, Episode 6. The ESFP and INTP natural pair, also known as the bronze pair. Also known as the greatest thing since sliced bread. Because, honestly, I don't even have any clue as to why sliced bread is so great. Because God knows I don't eat it. Except, you know, when I was a total fatty and weighed almost 300 pounds. You know, so, yeah. You know what's also really interesting? My ESTP friend recently told me that fatties are just the people in the world that make the most excuses. And I guess that makes sense coming from a Soul Temple Templar. Because they're all about loving them some justification. But really, at the end of the day, that was a really uncomfortable conversation. But, you know, it definitely applies to this discussion. Why? I mean, you know, INTPs are super gluttonous and kind of like most likely out of the 16 types to actually be obese. So it's kind of interesting. I wonder if psychologically INTPs are just super mega prone to making excuses. You know what I'm saying? So that could actually be a thing. Oh wait, they are because Si Child. Excuses, aka justifications attached to Si Child. So that could be a problem. Yeah, that's a little bit of a nugget for a future release of some amazing life-changing content. But, you know, I just want to give you guys a little bit of a taste real quick. As I'm somewhat close to my super ego at this very moment in time. So, ESFP and INTP natural pair. Arguably one of the rare natural pairs out there. Especially when considering INTP men to ESFP women. It's actually more common for ESFP men to get with INTP women. The difference is though is that INTP women are super rare. And like rarer than usual. So just like ENTP women are like the unicorn. So, and that's going to be a problem. So yeah. Okay. Sorry, my bad. I had to send a critical message there. That was a little awkward. But anyway. So that being said. The natural pair. The natural pair is like an amazing relationship. Because it is all about stability, fun. It's also all about being easy. And like I said in the last lecture. I was recently accused by a woman telling me. You only just want to be with an easy relationship. And I'm thinking to myself. I think that's like what every man wants. With their relationship with a woman. Right? And you know this is really important. This is especially important. Because when you actually consider Ecclesiastes chapter 7 verse 26. Which I'm going to actually quote to you folks right now. Let's do it right out of the King James quote. And this is coming from the wisest man who ever lived. Who just so happened to be an ENTP. He said quote. And I find more bitter than death. The woman whose heart is snares and nets. And her hands as bands. Also known as chains. Who so pleases God shall escape from her. But the sinner shall be taken by her. Yeah. That sucks. Sucks to be them. And that's the thing. Like given how servile INTP men are. Especially when considering masculine idealism. And their engagement with an ESFP natural pair woman. ESFP woman has extroverted intuition demon. This absolutely applies to the natural pair. And it's actually one of the recurring themes throughout the natural pair. That ends up causing a lot of strife and a lot of pain. Within the concept of natural pair. Even though it's super mega easy for both of these types. Because with the INTP being as pragmatic as they are. It can lead to some actual issues when it comes to extroverted intuition demon. Right. So because you know the ESFP quite literally represents. Or at least any demon type. ESPs quite literally represent what Solomon is talking about. In terms of their heart of traps and their hands. Which are shackles basically. Because there's a lot of control. And this is the relationship about control. It's all about control. And it's like an exchange of control. A transaction of control. Who is the leader? Which a lot of people are like what really that's a thing? And like yeah it is a thing. Especially when you have the INTJ subconscious with the ESFP. And the ENTJ unconscious of the INTP. Ultimately vying for leadership within the context of the relationship. Now it's typically. You'd think that this typically wouldn't actually be the case. When considering the different gender differences. But the reality of the situation is it doesn't matter. If it's an INTP woman or an ESFP woman. If it's an INTP man or an ESFP man. It doesn't matter. There still is ultimately a power struggle. And so when we're talking about like the ENTJ and the ISFJ. Which I call the power couple basically. They're the power couple. They're straight up. They are the power couple. In terms of achievement. As much as it can be maintained. Absolutely. They go beyond in terms of like personal achievement. And everything that the body temple is about. And having an amazing legacy. That couple is absolutely like the power couple. But this couple is the control couple basically. They're all about control. All about control. The thing is that the INTP kind of gets off on the whole control thing. Because then they're in control sometimes. And the ESFP is in control. And it's literally just this exchange of the hot potato of control. Between the two people within the pairs. Which we'll be examining why very soon. But the thing is though. Is that while that may be. The natural pair is definitely something that both these types should absolutely invest in. Whenever actually possible. The problem is that when you're looking at ESFP women. Versus INTP men. INTP men in western society are typically nowadays. Dopamine addicts. Horribly obese. Addicted to video games. Pornography. Dead end jobs. Or drugs and alcohol. If they're super hedonistic they're having some serious drugs and alcohol issues. Maybe even pornography issues. And if they're super servile instead. Then they are serving at the feet of people who would either oppress them or abuse them. Or not actually get anywhere for them in their life. And that can actually be a huge problem. For the ESFP and the INTP. Very, very, very huge problem. And I don't recommend that in the least. It can get worse. And here's the thing. ESFP women don't find that attractive at all. They absolutely do not find that attractive. Yes, the INTP man is like super mega cute. To an ESFP woman let's be honest. It's like super, super cute. But the thing is that cuteness can only go so far.

Because don't forget folks that women ultimately assess men like businesses. And it's because they're looking for proper judgment in men. And what exactly about an INTP who is addicted to all forms of dopamine intake. Basically pornography, video games, dead end job. Or mother's basement archetype. All that crap. What exactly is attractive about that kind of man? What exactly proves proper judgment from that INTP archetype? And it doesn't matter if they're hedonistic or servile from their octogram perspective. It really doesn't matter. It doesn't matter from their temper wheel perspective. But because from that perspective entirely the ESFP woman is just entirely grossed out by the INTP man. Well, it gets even worse. The ESFP man is also grossed out by INTP women. This is like a normal thing. This is like the one natural pair out of the natural pairs that really, really has a hard time passing the first barrier of entry when it comes to actually getting into a natural pair. Like a really hard time. Like super hard time. And it sucks. It sucks a lot. It sucks a lot. It sucks a lot for both these people because these are the two types out of the 16 that really actually struggle enjoying the benefits of the natural pair. Because the ESFP oftentimes, it doesn't matter if they're man or woman, like they're kind of like credulous enough to kind of go with the flow of society and societal judgments. And they're very quick to adopt societal judgments, especially with their ISFJ unconscious leading the way in terms of their credulous adoption of societal social norms. And then they apply that to how they're attracted to the opposite sex at the same time. And then the INTP is entirely misjudged by them or dejected by ESFPs because of how shallow ESFPs actually are. And that could be a huge problem. A huge problem. So this is the natural pair that's least likely to occur because of that shallow expectation. Shallow expectation meaning SI nemesis because it is shallow because SI is the function of expectation. And it's pretty shallow because it's the nemesis of the ESFP. That really sucks. Really, really sucks because the expectation is like super small. There's no depth to it. It'd have to be like a hero or like in the ego in order to have any depth to it whatsoever. They're lacking depth. So their judgments are lacking depth, especially when you look at TI trickster in combination with introverted sensing nemesis, the ESFP ends up basically entirely misjudging the INTP and doesn't even consider the INTP an option. Like the INTP is like out of the 16 types in terms like sexually is seen the most as like not even an option, like not an option. They're not an option. They're just not an option. They're dejected. They're dejected like I was. And ESFPs go out of their way to avoid rejection, but they are the source of dejection of INTPs. Let's be honest. I've struggled with dejection. Remember, folks, what is the difference between dejection and rejection? Dejection is that you're not even noticed. You're not even a choice to begin with. Rejection is, hey, at least you were a choice, but then they didn't want you and they moved on. That's rejection. Okay? And that feeling of rejection, that pain of rejection is just fleeting. So all you dudes out there who have fear of rejection when it comes to approaching girls, literally, screw you because like you have no excuse. You have no excuse. You don't even know what the pain of dejection is. And INTPs know the pain of dejection more than I do. They know the pain of dejection more than I do. They know the pain of dejection more than anybody. And it lingers with them and it stays with them and it stays with them indefinitely. They can't get away from that pain. They carry it with them everywhere they go. And what does the ESFP do? Just judge them shallowly. Great. Amazing. Unbelievable. It's ridiculous. Also, though, I would like to say ESFPs, if you actually do want to have a natural pair with the INTP, I'll give you a really nice tip right now. INTPs are constantly playing Warhammer 40K games at gaming shops and they're constantly playing Magic the Gathering, Yu-Gi-Oh, and Pokemon cards all the time. So all you got to do, you ESFPs out there, men, women, doesn't matter, go learn one of these games and go play and you will literally be surrounded by your natural pair by default. Good luck being attracted to one of them. Good luck. Good luck. But then again, if you see some of them that are attracted to you, be like, yeah, sure, we could go on a date. You got to lose 50 pounds first. Oh, yeah, that'd be good. That'd be so good. That would be amazing. Use that Heart Temple Wayfarer desecration. Please desecrate them. Please do it. Please do it. It would bring me great joy if you desecrate the INTPs because that's what I'm doing right now. Anyway, that's not to say that the ESFPs don't have problems either. We're going to get to that. Don't worry. Wow, is this person an airhead? Maybe I should help them not be an airhead. So anyway, the point of the relationship is that it is like breathing. It is easy. This is the one relationship in general where you can basically come as you are. You ever hear about those churches on Sunday that have the little reader boards up and it says come as you are? You all know it's bullshit. I know it's bullshit. It's total bullshit. Well, this is the one natural pair out of all the natural pairs where it is kind of bullshit, not because of natural compatibility. It has nothing to do with that. It has everything to do with nurtural societal programming, literally inhibiting these two from actually being drawn to each other to begin with. And honestly, I feel bad about it. I feel really bad for these people because they are literally missing out on something amazing in life. Having had the opportunity to experience a natural pair in my life, for myself, and I'm going to be talking about my natural pair, I think it might actually be the next episode. But I'm pretty stoked. I'm pretty happy about that prospect. But the point is, though, is that these types, they can't even get to that point because they can't get past the judgments. Because the INTP even – the INTP, like, gets to this point where they get stuck in their Fi Demon, I can't be accepted because I know I'm gluttonous. I know I'm addicted to Warhammer 40k. I know I'm addicted to World of Warcraft. I know I'm addicted to Magic the Gathering. I know I'm addicted to Yu-Gi-Oh and Pokemon cards and all this other stuff. I know I have these addictions, right? I know I have this deadly sin I'm dealing with, right? I know that I'm not really generative in my life. I know that I'm serving people, you know, all these things. And then – but I'm not even going to bother to change. Why change? Because no one looks in my direction anyway. So why bother? So the INTP, man, MGTOW code. You guys want to understand where MGTOW comes from? Men going their own way, that whole bullshit philosophy, which is bullshit and I hate it. I loathe MGTOW. MGTOW and ultimately Blackpill, which is even deeper. Screw those things. They come from disgruntled INTP incel nerds who play Magic the Gathering.

That's where it comes from. That's Blackpill, okay? And ESFP women, let's be honest, they're pretty attractive. In general, they go out of their way to be attractive. They have SE Hero. That's just kind of how they are. And when an attractive woman shows up to a Warhammer tournament like that, ESFP woman, everyone's going to be like, what the hell is going on here? And it's funny because they enter the back room. Everyone's playing their cards. Everyone's playing with their toys, you know, like INTPs do. And then all the INTPs within the room are dead silent at the moment that she walks in. Losers. So don't be that. Don't be that person. Seriously. Don't be that person. It applies to the natural pair. But, again, folks, when it comes to ESFP and INTP, it really, really is not. It can't because both these types have a really hard time dealing with external judgment. Very hard time. I mean this is definitely exemplified in the Discord server, especially when we are seeing a certain ESFP who gallivants around as an INTJ, for example, and is having a hard time accepting the fact that she is an ESFP due to external judgment. And the external judgment of others is literally dictating her own thinking to her. Well, it's not her fault. She can't help it. Welcome to TI Trickster combined with X-Worded Sensing Hero. It's not her fault. It's just who she is. Okay? I know like so many people are trying to like shit on this person, but like stop because she's just being who she is in the best way that she knows how. Okay? Or look at INTPs. It's like INTPs are so afraid of external negative judgment, afraid of not being accepted. And the INTPs typically already know because they're outcome focused. Like these people are all about outcome, right? You know, outcome versus progression. They're all about the outcome from a type grid perspective. Okay? That they know that they already know. TI Hero already knows that they're not acceptable. So then they just throw their hands up and give up. And they're like, I'm not even going to bother being a better person, a better man or a better woman. I mean, yeah, guys, I've been shitting on INTP men here. Let me start shitting on the INTP women. I'm not going to bother doing my hair. I'm not going to bother having a great wardrobe. I'm not going to bother getting a haircut. I'm not going to bother to shower. God, I know many INTP women who don't shower. Ugh. Gross. It's kind of disgusting and annoying. It's really annoying. So because the INTP is having to deal with X-rated feeling inferior external judgment, and the ESFP is having to deal with X-rated thinking child external judgment, these two types have a very hard time actually getting together. Very hard time. To be fair, I don't blame them. But at the same time, both these types need to be taking full responsibility for actually changing. Because, let's be honest, some of the natural pairs out there, some of the natural pairs are actually really good at passing the test of the critic and really bad at actually passing the test of the parents, which we've been talking about throughout this lecture series. If you're being one of those ESFPs that only watches content relevant to you, don't worry. I'll be talking about that later in this lecture. Don't worry. I got you. Don't worry. Never. So managing judgment is the reason why these two just really, really struggle. And I feel so bad for them because they are so missing out. And like I said, sometimes they're really good at doing tests of the parents. Sometimes they're really good at doing tests of the critic. This is the pair that really, really struggles the most with actually passing the test of the critic. And we're going to talk about that very soon. And don't forget, obviously there's golden pairs out there. You don't have to get a natural pair. You can get a golden pair. But a golden pair is kind of worse because while it's really easy to get into a golden pair, it's really hard to stay in a golden pair. Really hard. Because the golden pairs have expectations. And they expect really good compatibility. They expect really good origin. And compatibility is not just among cognitive functions from a nature perspective. It is especially important from an octagram perspective. So for example, from an octagram perspective, like if you're UDUF like me, then you would want to be with another UDUF person that is your golden pair. So like, yeah. But it's still a relationship based on expectations. Whereas the natural pair is a relationship based on desires. Which means the natural pair doesn't exactly expect compatibility. It doesn't expect getting their cognitive origin fed to them on a silver platter like the golden pair does. It doesn't have the expectation. It just wants it. But it doesn't expect you to do it for them. They just want it from you. So that when you actually decide to give it to them, they're super happy about it. Super happy. I mean, what's not to love? Seriously, what's not to love? I mean, I love that. I'm in that. I'm down. I'm so down. But I'm a little different than most people. Kind of edgy. Kind of weird. So my philosophy, have both. So yeah. So let's talk about gender differences first. Because a lot of people don't realize that when it comes to any type of sexual relationship, gender is the one thing that really determines everything. Which kind of makes sense. Because you kind of have to have a man and a woman to really get to the deepest level sexually, etc. I mean, I'm not trying to be offensive to the LGBTQ folk. I'm not trying to be offensive when I say that. But I'm just saying in order to get all the biological benefits of the sexual relationship, having one part feminine and one part masculine really goes a long way. Again, not trying to be offensive here. But anyway, masculine idealism and feminine solipsism. Feminine solipsism basically dictates that all women are innately more entitled and more selfish than men. That's a fact. That's an absolute fact. I'm in a relationship with an ESTP, right? And this ESTP, definitely love her. That's well done. She's got extroverted sensing hero. She's got extroverted feeling child. Most people are like, wow, she's so external. I bet she's not really solipsistic. Wrong. She is just as solipsistic as any other woman out there. So seriously, if you're a woman thinking that you're less solipsistic or more solipsistic than any other woman just because your cognitive functions are in a different order, I'm here to tell you, you're full of shit. You don't actually know what you're talking about. So that's bullshit. And no, that's not a thing. And then there's masculine idealism. Masculine idealism basically means that men are innately more selfless at birth. And then as they get older, they have to learn how to become selfish. They have to learn how to become selfish through their rite of passage. Whereas women have to learn how to become selfless through their rite of passage. That is their rite of passage, which is giving birth. That is their rite of passage. Whereas men is when society abandons them and they have to go out of the way to, like, survive on their own. Absolute, total, male independence. That is the rite of passage when it comes to masculine idealism. So let's look at the difference here. What does a solipsistic ESFP look like, a very selfish ESFP? This is the ESFP that, you know, has got to always have, you know, their nails done. Yeah. Or getting their hair done. You know, a little procedure there, a little here, a little procedure there. You know, that kind of thing, right? You know, selfishly being entitled to other people's knowledge, other people's thoughts. You know, I'm important, so that means that you have to tell me what you're thinking about me. Great. So it's an example of a solipsistic ESFP. Let's look at an idealistic ESFP. The idealistic ESFP constantly devoted to helping others think about things properly. These are like the teaching ESFPs going out of the way to work hard and perform for the sake of other people, give other people good experiences at the cost of themselves, you know, and make sure people are thinking about things properly. This is why ESFP men are consistently teachers. And it's so funny because I can echo the sentiment of my ESTP mentor, Robert Bryant, who said, quote, those that can do, those that can't teach. Yeah. Well, welcome to the masculine idealistic ESFP men. That's literally their lot in life. I'm so sorry. Hopefully they get a rite of passage so that doesn't happen. So they can actually become more capable and actually do instead of be stuck in the rut of teaching from which nobody ever would be willing to submit to them. No woman would actually really be able to submit to them. And the women that actually do submit to an ESFP teacher, are they really that high quality? You know, statistically, when you're looking at the average, think about it. And I'm not saying that all ESFP men, male teachers, are losers. I'm not saying that. But I'm saying that, like, most of them are. That's what I'm saying. So just keep that in mind. Now looking at the INTP, what does a female solipsistic INTP woman look like? All about her comfort. All about what she consumes. All about her dopamine. Yeah, that sucks. That really sucks. Putting her comfort and her dopamine, her sense of safety, what she likes to eat, her favorite foods. Putting all those things above her man. That really sucks. A lot. Like, it's unbelievable. Well, actually, it's entirely believable because it happens. Then let's look at the masculine idealistic INTP. So self-sacrificing, serving others, all about the greater good, right? Like Bill Gates who just had a divorce with Melinda Gates and she got, like, half of all his money. Wow. That's really horrible. Right? You know, saying, and then he has this perspective where he's going around in public being like, well, you know, if she would take me back, I'd take her back in a heartbeat. Yeah. Yeah, I know. I know you would. I know you would. Like, it's ridiculous. Masculine idealism absolutely destroys INTP men. Absolutely. And then because of that, because they go out of their way to be so self-sacrificing and work so hard, they come to realize that no woman actually, especially in Western society, gives a damn about their relationship investment or their relationship equity as much as a woman would ever claim otherwise. But those claims are actually false and proven false because you cannot take a woman at her word because she has poor judgment. All women lack good judgment, proper sober judgment. All women lack judgment. Okay? Because they have, they make up for it with their perceptive capabilities. Right? And only men have all the judgment, but they lack perceptive capabilities. That's why men are kind of oblivious to things when women are hinting things to them. And that's why. Because men lack perception and women have all of it, basically. So the INTP, after being servile for so long, gets pretty upset that all of their relationship equity, all of their investments into this woman or this person doesn't even matter anymore. It sucks to be them. So cognitive looping ends up making men more idealistic and makes women more solipsistic. And when you're talking about the natural pair in terms of, like, enabling, enabling can be, like, a serious issue. A very, very serious issue. And we're going to be talking about why that is in a few minutes here. So let's talk about cognitive origins. So INTPs are all about discovery. Right? They want to get themselves discovery. The ESFP is all about reverence. And the ESFP actually is a consumer of reverence beyond that. And INTPs are a producer of discovery. They love producing discovery. And that's a really big deal. And this is, like, the core model between these two people. So, you know, how are their basic origins needs met? Primarily through the optimistic loops. Extroverted sensing and introverted sensing. Introverted thinking and extroverted thinking. And secondarily, the pessimistic loops, which are extroverted intuition to introverted intuition and introverted feeling to extroverted feeling. What does that exactly mean? It's like a lot of psychobabble there. What it means is, folks, is that, like, you as a person, as an individual, can be cognitive looping, which means your parent function is very underdeveloped and your child function and your hero function are looping together. And when they're looping together like that, because you're basically leading with the trickster as your parent function, according to Chris Taylor, which is an amazing thought. I love that thought. But the point is, is that when this is happening, okay, like when that is going on, when that is a thing, you are basically becoming, you are enabling yourself, basically. That's what you're doing. You're enabling yourself and making yourself more irresponsible as a result, right? Well, here's the issue. Because when you're in a natural pair, your child function just loves the other person's hero. And their hero loves their child. And their child loves your hero. And your hero loves their child. So what ends up happening is that you two just enable each other constantly. Enable, enable, enable, enable, enable. And because of that, you end up creating this feedback loop of irresponsibility within the relationship because none of y'all's parent functions are even there doing their jobs because you're looping constantly. However, you need the cognitive loops to actually be able to produce cognitive orges is what people are looking for. But the thing is, is while you can get your origins, it would be like cheap origins. It wouldn't be complete origins because you're lacking the parent function's interference to make sure that the origins are being delivered on a silver platter. No, actually be delivered on a golden platter. You see what I'm saying? Because it requires more effort because it's more expensive, right? That's the whole point. So in their subconscious, each type accesses the other's home temple. The INTP's ESFJ subconscious accesses the heart temple and the ESFP's INTJ subconscious accesses the body temple. Ultimately, each type's complementary origin, satisfaction for the ESFP and purpose for the INTP could still be met when both these types grow their subconscious. Why?

Well, the reason is, is that when the INTP is serving up discovery and bringing it into the relationship for the ESFP, the ESFP's secondary origin of satisfaction is actually being met through discovery because they actually feel like a higher quality of satisfaction is actually being given to them instead of a basic sense of satisfaction. It's not basic. It's a higher quality, right? It's like someone who has the love language of acts of service, but then they usually pair up with people who have the love language of gifts because when the gift giver gives the acts of service person a gift, the acts of service person takes it in as, oh my God, this is the greatest act of service ever because it is a gift because it's that high quality, right? It's the same concept except the cognitive origins being exchanged at the natural pair level. Okay? That's like what happens, right? That's it. Well, guess what? Conversely, when the ESFP is providing reverence and taking in reverence within the relationship and actually working on the INTP's reference in a lot of ways, what ends up happening is that the INTP's secondary cognitive origin of purpose is actually being achieved because the INTP is like, oh, I don't really need as much respect, but the thing is as I gain respect, I'm realizing what my purpose is. And then that also helps the INTP grow even further because the purpose thing is just this big hole they're not entirely sure. So it ends up creating an amazing feedback loop where the INTP keeps producing discovery and then the ESFP eats it up as satisfaction and the ESFP keeps bringing reverence to the relationship or at least requiring reverence for themselves actually, let's be honest, because ESFPs are consumers of reverence, right? And because of that, the INTP has to contend with behaving in more reverent ways instead of being irreverent because they are irreverent to themselves every time they have their dopamine addictions basically, which is a huge problem. So if they're irreverent to themselves, how can they be reverent to the ESFP? And this is how ESFP women look at men like businesses instead of art. They're assessing men like businesses instead of art, whereas men assess women like art instead of business because men want the perception, they don't care about the judgment, men already have the judgment. Women don't want the perception and men, they care more about the judgment. That's why six-packs don't really matter that much, only at certain times. Six-packs, a man with six-pack abs is just like, oh, it's supposed to be there as proof because it's hard to earn one of those, it's hard to have that and that should be proof of better judgment, right? So yeah, especially with someone like me who used to weigh 300 pounds and me having six-pack abs is a really, really big deal. I'm getting closer every single day. The fat is just coming off and the muscles are getting built, getting closer, getting closer, and I'm not going to give up. It's like top three bucket list items for me. So definitely moving forward. Just so that I could say that fat chase is utterly and totally annihilated. So anyway, moving on. So again, back to the business versus art. So the INTP or ESFP man must carry his burden of performance. This is why women view men as a business and burden of performance is proven through judgment. So the INTP or ESFP man within the context of this natural pair, they need to make sure that they are able to prove proper judgment and they do that through actions, proper actions. So like an INTP man, for example, who has frame, he always puts what he's discovering above his ESFP woman. But then he always makes sure that he invites the ESFP woman to come along with him and have the shared experience and share in the experience. He has to share the discovery. It's a form of shared discovery. The INTP is like, ooh, I'm discovering this new pizza or ooh, I'm discovering this new trail. And then he invites the ESFP woman to come along with him. It's always what he is discovering and when he is holding frame, when he's being alpha in the relationship, he's always running it from the perspective of what he's discovering because he is producing discovery for the relationship. What about ESFP man if they're in that position? Well, an ESFP man, they are expecting submission to them basically. So they're going to be acting in such a respectable manner in every area of their life as a good person, as a good father, as a good businessman, as a good athlete, whatever, so that it makes it very easy for their INTP woman to submit to him, to show him respect because he is at a respectable level. He has the status of respect in his life basically. And anytime she doesn't show him respect, he's like, okay, I'm going to have a talk with you. Oh, that's how you're going to behave? Well, fine, then I'm just going to want somebody else then and he'll just go elsewhere because he's not going to take that kind of disrespect, right? Because remember, frame is all about you as a man or the sun in a solar system. And that solar system is your life. And all the planets orbiting you are like members of your family or friends basically. And your woman is your Venus. And if she just gets off orbit just a little bit, you solar flare and, you know, right? Yeah, solar flare whip, you know what I'm saying? Right on that Venus, you know what I'm saying? But if she still doesn't get back in orbit, just get another Venus. It's all good. There's a lot of them, just tons of Venus. Just bring them in, bring them in. Tons of Venus, lots of Venus all over the place, right? So, you know, like add them in, just add them in. Now, from the perspective that men view women as art because women hold perception and men want perception, really great perception, the INTP or ESFP woman must carry her burden of submission, aka preservation of beauty. And so an ESFP woman who orbits her INTP man, well, she's always making sure that she's always 20% body fat or less. That would be nice. She's always got her hair done, lashes done, whatever. Skin is always super mega soft. It's also very clear, has a proper wardrobe. Absolutely, definitely is going out of her way to make sure she is always available to share in whatever the INTP is discovering at any moment in time. Definitely listening to her INTP man. And that doesn't mean just like hearing what he's saying, but actually doing what he is telling her to do. That's really important. And always making sure that he feels wanted. And at the end of the day, it is ultimately to put him above her, to make sure that she is properly orbiting her son as Venus. Don't believe me? Listen to Lana Del Rey's song, Young and Beautiful. She literally says in the song, you are my son or he is my son, which is pretty interesting. Gets even crazier if you listen to her song, Dark Paradise. And by the way, Lana Del Rey is an INFP. For those of you that didn't matter, heard. Anyway, so what about the INTP woman? Well, the INTP woman puts her man's respect and respecting her man above her own discovery and lets her man lead. She gets to discover things in life as he ends up gaining additional status. And as he enters new levels in his life, she is discovering new levels in hers. That is ultimately how these women should be interacting with their man. So how do these two types actually get into the golden pair or to the natural pair? And that's where things get crazy because it's really hard. It's actually super hard for these types to get together as we explained in the first 22 minutes repeatedly of this lecture. And that is the test of the critic. And the test of the critic basically has a principle that we always say and it is, quote, they would be successful in life even if they had never met me. So the test of the critic, what does it actually look like? It's their inferior function. It's like, so you're a natural pair. The other person's inferior function must be as or more developed than my own critic function. That's the test of the critic. So the ESFP, for example, looks at an underdeveloped INTP and feels, wow, my extroverted feeling critic is more helpful and ethical and way more socially aware than your extroverted feeling inferior. You are a loser. You see what I'm saying? Like it's bad. It's like really bad when that happens. Or the INTP looks at an underdeveloped ESFP and thinks my Ni critic takes more risks and is more willful than your Ni inferior. Wow, that's ridiculous. Because if that's the case, there's no way that you would ever even have any remote desire or passion for me whatsoever. So yeah, moving on. Don't have time for that. Don't have time for that. So failing the critic's test violates the basic principle that binds these types together. They would be successful in life even if they never met me. And that's the thing. Like your inferior functions, when you're getting into natural pair, it doesn't matter what natural pair it is, your inferior functions have to be more developed than the other person's critic. I would like to say, though, there is a bit of a caveat when it comes to the critic. The critic, when they first meet, it's like, yeah, yeah, your inferior function, yeah, it is more developed than my critic. Okay, I'm in. And then they're looking at you and like, yeah, your inferior function is more developed than my critic too. Yeah, let's get into a relationship. Yeah, let's do it. We're in. But here's the problem. The test the critic doesn't happen over and over again. The test the critic basically happens once. And the critic function, the critic function, once that precedent has been established to begin the natural pair, the critic function doesn't check again if they're still growing, doesn't check again if they're still aspiring with their inferior function. And that's where the relationship can end up becoming a failure later. We'll talk about that. So that's ultimately the test of the critic. That's how they get into the relationship, okay? So let's look at how the relationship actually works once they get into the relationship. So obviously they have great emotional compatibility, they have great sexual compatibility, and the natural pair, extroverted functions always have introverted functions to consume. The natural pair excels at creating and maintaining energy, basically. And then also within the natural, each type's hero function is pumped by the other person's child function and vice versa. It's like a giant circle in each other's heads and they're all happy for it. The natural is magnetic because each child idolizes the other person's hero. The theme of the natural is the childhood hero and it's like they're in awe of each other, like consistently, right? And the hero and child creates the fun and the parent inferior creates protection and safety. And ultimately the parent provides relief to the other person's inferior function. But let's look at the actual loops. Because remember, we were talking about cognitive looping before. So when the extroverted sensing hero of the ESFP is matching up with the introverted sensing child of the INTP, which basically goes like this. Extroverted sensing hero is constantly showing the INTP new things and creating experience that titillate SI child's need for discovery. And the extroverted sensing hero extracts reverence from the INTP through its onslaught of the sensation-inducing gravy train. I love that. This builds up loyalty in the INTP and reverence in the ESFP. So the ESFP is like, oh, they're never gonna take off. That's nice. And there's introverted thinking hero and extroverted thinking child from the perspective of the INTP to the ESFP. Again, this is the optimistic functional loops. Introverted thinking hero's logical prowess finds a precocious playmate in extroverted thinking child. The ESFP wants to absorb all the powerful mind of the INTP by constantly throwing in new input to see what sticks. The INTP's capacity for intellectual discovery becomes perpetually facilitated by TE child's endless queries, which also makes the INTP feel highly valued because the ESFP is just going to be like this giant miner that picks the brain of the INTP constantly and not give up. But there's also pessimistic functional loops. So then you have introverted feeling parent and extroverted feeling inferior. The ESFP's Fi parent invests in the INTP and remains a source of gratitude and moral guidance for the extroverted feeling inferior to have on tap. The INTP's extroverted feeling inferior demonstrates the selfish compassion that the ESFP didn't believe was even possible. And that's one of the biggest things because ESFPs constantly have extroverted feeling critic and then don't really see compassion very often because they themselves are projecting their own personal lack of compassion onto everybody else. And then all of a sudden they see the INTP is just doing it just fine. They're like, oh, wow, that's amazing. I want that for myself, but then maybe I can learn from them and actually be a better, more compassionate ESFP as a result of the INTP's example in my life. Amazing. Then there's the extroverted intuition parent to the introverted intuition inferior. Extroverted intuition parent belongs to the INTP, introverted intuition inferior belongs to the ESFP. Extroverted intuition parent safeguards the ESFP's future and freedom of choice and is precisely aware of the risks in each option or choice for their partner and the relationship as a whole. The INTP steers introverted intuition inferior away from enslavement and entanglement and toward perpetual freedom. As a result, an INF can feel safe in the hands of the INTP, certain that they will always have a choice and not just any choice, but a really good one, which is like, you know, mind blown when you consider like the power of the natural pair. If only these two types could actually get over their shallow judgments relating to society and each other to actually be willing to consider having a relationship, if only, because this natural pair is like actually super mega rare. And I find that utterly frustrating, which I've said a million times in this lecture. So what happens, what happens like, so you're able to pass the test of critic. And again, the test of critic can be really hard for a lot of people. And it's especially hard for this natural pair due to the external natural judgments from Western society inhibiting this relationship. In Eastern society, it's not really that much of a problem, but in Western society, it absolutely is a problem because INTPs are just insanely denigrated while ESFPs are put on a pedestal for some reason. So what happens when things go wrong? Yeah, you got into the relationship, you got to the test of critics, a little bit harder to get into the natural pair. It's supposed to be a lot easier to maintain the natural pair than it is a golden pair. Right, right, right, right, right? Yeah, absolutely. So why is that? Well, guess what? The biggest risk for every single natural pair is ultimately enablement, right? Enablement normalizes destructive or irresponsible behavior. These two types due to cognitive looping from their hero functions to the other person's child function and vice versa, literally creates the perfect environment for irresponsibility. The perfect environment. The absolute perfect environment for irresponsibility. That is a huge, huge problem. A huge problem. So what causes enablement? One more time, when the hero and the child loop never stops. This is caused by absent parent functions. Okay, so for the ESFP and the INTP, these loops manifest as a potentially hedonistic lifestyle between X-rated sensing hero and SI child. They may sacrifice everything for the next high of a good experience or the next dopamine hit. It's like going to Las Vegas four times a year and that's all they look forward to. It's just ridiculous. And they never come back any richer and they wonder what's going on. Where's the consequential awareness? It's just not there because X-rated intuition parent is entirely absent and they just keep losing money, right? And number two, not growing into high quality people is a loop between TI hero and TE child, ignoring the moral and ethical insight of the feeling functions. So without parent functions from both partners present within the relationship, the living virtues are often suppressed and the deadly sins are expressed more often. For example, like how generative would an INTP actually be if any parent wasn't around to predict the future or prevent risks or problems or issue warnings when necessary, right? Or to be aware of consequences. Well, basically the INTP will decay into a gluttonous consumption without their eyes fixated on creating a better tomorrow for the both of them. They become the greatest burden. They became everything that they swore to destroy. Gross. What about when the ESFP, are they even able to be modest if their introverted feeling parent is not responsible with their self-worth and deep sympathy for other people's misfortunes? As a result, they become vainglorious and they spend everything they get on themselves. You know, that actually comes from James chapter four, James the ESTP. What causes fights and quarrels among you, it is written. Do they not come from desires that do battle within you? You kill and you covet, you adulterous people. But you do not have what you want and you kill and covet, but you do not have what you want and you don't get what you want because you don't ask God. But God doesn't wanna give it to you because when you receive what he does give to you, what he does actually give you, you spend it on your own pleasures. You adulterous people. Wow. Okay. And that's literally what the ESFP is doing here. Spending everything they receive and being unaware of other people's misfortunes and they're all vainglorious. They spend it on themselves, they become very vain people. So without the parent, there is no way to challenge the hero function. The successor failure of this relationship hinges on the parent function. You have to have the parent. So ultimately, while the critic is the barrier of entry into the relationship, the longer the test of the parent sustains the relationship. The critic gets you into the relationship, but the parent keeps you into the relationship. So ultimately the parent is testing for humility, humility of the hero, right? And it allows the parent function to ultimately guide the other person's inferior function to growth. Because if you guys have parent functions present in the natural pair, guess what? The infant, aka the inferior functions, Ni inferior, extra rooted feeling inferior, will be nurtured by the other person such that you guys are even able to aspire even more. But the only way that you two are ever actually going to be able to aspire is if you first take responsibility. And it's really hard for natural pairs to take responsibility sometimes. When you see couples out there who are homeless or drug addicts, they're natural pairs because they just enable the irresponsibility. When they should be focused on enabling the responsibility by taking responsibility for the other person's personal growth. They have to, yes, I am responsible for my own personal growth, yes. But they also have to be there and be responsible for the other person's personal growth. That's the legitimate thing. That's facts. That's legit. That's real, okay? That's what it means. So that's why the test the parent exists to keep the relationship together. And it does this by accomplishing two different roles. It interrupts and refines the hero and child loops. And it also puts proper pressure on the inferior function for aspiration. So it stops the irresponsibility and expects responsibility. And then it puts proper natural pressure upon the inferior function. So the inferior function actually aspires. Sounds like a good deal to me. And that's how they maintain the natural pair. So for example, extroverted intuition parent. Two examples. Any parent must interrupt the extroverted sensing loop. Any parent's awareness of the future must guide these types toward preparation for future abundance. Because abundance is a big deal with this relationship. This is the relationship of abundance. It is a relationship of outcome. This is the relationship of control. They have to be willing to cede control so that they can have a great abundance, a great outcome. They must sacrifice some of the pleasures of the present, you know, relinquish control, to keep their dreams alive, their future dreams. Extroverted intuition parent must also put enough pressure on the ESFP to use their Ni inferior to take risks. The more risks the ESFP takes, the more discovery is available to the INTP. Amazing. The ESFP's willingness to take a risk also proves concretely their trust in the INTP's overall guidance. And in this trust, the INTJ subconscious ends up aspiring because, you know, the virtue and vice of the INTJ just happens to be trust versus paranoia, right? And there's introverted feeling parent, right? Introverted feeling parent must interrupt the introverted thinking, extroverted thinking loop by providing a set of standards that challenge the echo chamber within the introverted thinking, extroverted thinking circle. The ESFP must provide sober feedback, refined feedback, that guides and restricts the conversational exchange between the introverted thinking and extroverted thinking loop. It's like, why is this relevant? Why are we talking about this? Or I heard this story already, dear. Do we need to hear it again? Oh, you already told them that story. Yeah, there's a need for that. Introverted feeling parent must also put pressure on the INTP to engage skillfully in social interactions. Thank God. The introverted feeling parent helps grow the INTP into becoming the most helpful person around. And I'm not talking like most helpful as in like they're the most helpful. I mean, like their help is more precise. It's like, it's more meaningful. It's not low hanging fruit. It's more of a gift instead of a present, right? Presents are things that you give people that you want to give them. Gifts are things that you give people that they want. Isn't it funny that the best archetype of the 16 types, when they give gifts and they have extroverted intuition trickster, but they're the best at giving gifts, that's the ISFP. Unbelievable, isn't it? Unbelievable. That's their love language, to produce gifts. And no one does it better than an ISFP. That makes sense because they're the artist, of course, because their gifts are their art, their gifts to the world, their gifts are their legacy. Makes perfect sense. Furthermore, extroverted feeling inferior can socially finesse other people into being a source of reverence for the ISFP and their relationship as a whole. Why wouldn't you do that? Why not? Like, why wouldn't anyone want that? Not want that. Anyway, the bottom line is, is that in order for these people to stay in a relationship, they need to obviously first take responsibility for their own personal growth, but they also have to recognize that it is their responsibility to take, you know, to watch over the other, their partner's personal growth and to not leave them behind and to not enable them. As long as that's happening, this relationship will last forever. This relationship is the most likely for people to get married. This relationship is most likely for them to stay together. This relationship is most likely to have really decent nuclear family to a point. This also, this relationship, my hypothesis is, is that people who are in the natural pair also live the longest. That's pretty cool. Just so long as they're not enabling each other, then I suggest then they would likely be able to enable each other to death, and that would suck. That would really suck. So, bottom line is, when you're in this natural pair, always take responsibility for the other person's personal growth. It is your responsibility to challenge the other person to make sure that they are continuing to aspire with their inferior function. So, anyway, folks, thanks for watching and listening. I'll see you guys next month for our premium lectures, which includes the season finale for season 14, part 3. See you guys then. Good night.